

Like A Tree Sitting
My Space will be Calm and Still
A Place to unwind.

Garden is Home
where Dandelions run
free, an offering,
Bumble bee cocktails,
Echinacea, Black-eyed Susans greet passing travelers from
here and over there
and way way way
over there

Neither the potatoes nor
the tomatoes are in the ground.

The soil in it even prepared
yet. It stuns at me, just visible through crown of weeds.

Thanks to the oaks, the poplars,
especially the maples and the
mulberry for their independence.

We all know girls turn into trees. 2026 PM 2 L

I plant myself, the whole being of me -
let myself stretch
from Earth's core to the sky -
sky that may become tree:
the weight of every tree
from every forest comes from the air.

Reach my brambled fingers up
into new twiggy constellations,
my body, a creased map
of sunlight, air and rain.
Plant me here, in this moment,
with Daphne, Myrrha, Baccis, Thalia,
the completion of my last Rilke ring.
I give myself to it
as in: I am defined by it
as in: I define it.

Home is where waves crash
Where sunsets burn orange
Where dolphins dance
Where rainbow gardens bloom
Where children laugh & sing
Where the air is crisp
With notes of peace
Home is where
you find harmony
in nature ♡

The house diminishes as the tiny garden explodes.

A bouquet of rose, lavender
and dandelion fills the gaps
with pigment and perfume.

The Japanese Maple stretches
with no limitation
and the Crepe Myrtle
stays strong, shares space.

The shore Pine disperses
seeds, by way of her cones
carried and placed by small animals.

Plant life leads the way
where once restricted to garden.

I DREAM
OF YARDS WITH NATIVE PLANTS
AND THE END OF WAR
WITH MY ENGLISH IVY SCOURGE

OF KIDS LAUGHING, BIRDS SINGING
AND NEVER AGAIN
FINDING BULLET CASINGS
ON MY LAWN

OF LAYING DOWN AMONG
THE SWORD FERNS
TO BREATHE MY LAST
LETTING MUSHROOMS AND
NEW TREES
HELP ME LIVE FOREVER

Oh my grandmother's
graceful gravitas,
well of wonderlove

Her advice, adept
as an adage;
her words rang right.

Yet breadcrumbs brokered
among the brood coat
our lives, limit liabilities—
gifts given for ninety-eight years.
